秘密工作と破壊工作、レジスタンスへの援助：

第二次世界大戦中にアングロサクソン系米国人の協力が果たした役割

Secrecy, Sabotage and Aiding the Resistance:

How Anglo-American Cooperation Shaped World War Two.

第二次世界大戦に突入後、英国および米国保安局諜報員は士気操作や人材の調達、敵対政府組織にその標的を定めました。占領下にある国々における破壊工作員の養成や反乱軍の組成を通じて敵対組織の弱体化が図られました。このようなレジスタンス活動に同志として参加したメンバーは、イタリアや米国にいる反対勢力から迎え入れられた者たちでした。また、米国戦略情報局（OSS）と英国特殊作戦執行部（SOE）は定期的に情報の共有を行い協働し、敵国にある企業をブラックリスト化したり、英国 Jedburgh に組織した隠密部隊が世界中に散らばる反乱同盟軍を援助しました。本コレクションには、第二次世界大戦中に、英国と米国の両諜報機関が協働し欧米圏は基よりアフリカ、アジア、南米に至る世界中で行われた諜報活動、工作活動の様々な記録が収録されています。

"Like the America First Committee, most of the Isolationist-cum-Fifth Columnist organizations sickened and died after Pearl Harbor, but not before carrying on as long as they could muster any support."

Anglo-American joint projects, 1940-1954

These records focus on ways in which the United States and the United Kingdom worked together. Sabotage training took place at Camp X, Canada, where Britons and Americans learned methods to hinder the enemy and aid rebels. The trained men would be known as the Jedburghs, an elite group of covert operations soldiers whose motto was 'surprise, kill, and vanish'. This British co-operation with the US was only achieved through the negotiations which are also covered here.

British security services' activities in the USA, 1940-1945

These items cover British operations inside the United States. Many of these papers focus on the surveillance and assessment of groups within the US. Groups of interest included Italian anti-fascists and hostile nationalists from the America First Committee, as well as Basque organisations. American relations with the Austrian legion and co-operation with Russia were also of interest. As the war progressed, these papers would change focus to cover Anglo-American trade and diplomacy.

US and British security services' operations in Europe, 1940-1945

Diplomacy plays a significant role in these items, as the UK and US held a number of meetings to discuss their strategies for different countries. The discussions include the signing of the 'London agreement' London Agreement on military co-operation. These reports cover British and US operations from Belgium to Crete; their main focus being on activities in France and Italy. Records from 1945 describe conditions in Italy at the end of the war.

Anglo-American operations in China and the South East Asia Command, 1940-1946

These items focus on China and only contain items on South East Asia where they relate to China. Many of these documents also contain maps. The main themes of these papers are operational details, intelligence on China itself, and the conflict for the coast of China. The British Army Aid Group also features as it assisted escaped prisoners of war.

Britain and the US in the Far East (excluding China), 1940-1946

Some of the French forces rejected the 1940 Armistice. Led by Charles de Gaulle, the Free French fought Germany's allies from French Indochina. French Indochina included Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam. These papers reveal how UK and US forces operating in Malaysia, Thailand, and Myanmar worked with the Free French to defend these colonies from Japanese forces. Topics covered include secret missions in Thailand, relations with the Free French, situation reports from Myanmar and attacks on Japanese shipping.

Ministry of Economic Warfare and economic intelligence, 1939-1945

These reports cover each week's economic developments around the World. They explore topical issues like German manpower. Important writings on economic developments are summarised in a series of reviews. The core areas covered in these reports include finance, industrial output, food production, trade agreements, and weapons supplies.
